Founder Note

Building this brand forced me to face myself in a way I had been avoiding for a long time. For most of my young adult life, I was always moving, always trying to outrun my own thoughts, my pain, and the parts of me I did not yet know how to hold. I didn't know how to sit still with myself. I think it's ironic that coffee made me slow down, because it's usually known for making people speed up. But for me, coffee became part of the moment when I finally did stop. It slowed me down enough to notice what I had been missing, and to feel what I had been pushing away. Seaside Sip Coffee Co. means more to me than a business. It is a reflection of a hard, honest journey toward stillness, healing, and learning how to be present in my own life.
